Developer Valerio Morabito built a trophy home in Miami Beach for his wife, Victoria's Secret model Vita Sidorkina.

But she loves their current place right nearby — close enough, in fact, to see into the new house's backyard — too much to leave it.

So now Morabito's under-construction manse, designed by Michele Bonan and Max Strang at 1510 W. 25th St. on Miami's Sunset Islands, is hitting the market for $26 million.

Slated for completion later this year, the 10,000-square-foot teak wood, glass and stone home on 0.8 acres features six bedrooms, six bathrooms and three powder rooms.

Other inclusions: a gym, an elevator with rooftop access, a wine cave, two media rooms, a 90-foot-long pool, an outdoor kitchen and a six-car garage.

Perhaps 26 is Morabito's lucky number. In 2013, he sold an Upper East Side mansion at 45 E. 74th St. for $26 million to China's wealthiest self-made female billionaire, real estate developer Zhang Xin.

That townhouse came with two pools — one in the basement and one on the roof. It initially went on the market for $33 million and was ogled by Leonardo DiCaprio and Brad Pitt before Zhang bought it.
